FABRIC QULAITY

Of course any basic fibre can be made into finished fabrics of very widely varying quality. Fabrics made for the school wear industry tends to be very well specified for performance and value compared to other fabrics used, for example, in the fashion industry where different characteristics are sought.

All the main manufacturers of school uniforms have put many years into refining the characteristics as well as the blends of the fabrics which they use to deliver ever better products and value for money. It is these that we most often specify-and for this very reason.
